OUR NEXT CONCERT
Paris Washboard
Sunday, February 23, 2020
2:00 to 4:30 pm
Haddonfield United Methodist Church

A French jazz group devoted to the revival of traditional jazz, Paris Washboard was founded in 1988, evolving from the rich European/international appreciation for “modern American jazz” as it was first experienced in the decades of the 1920s and 1930s following World War I. Today the ensemble’s unique sound is comprised of just four instruments: clarinet, trombone, piano, and washboard. Listeners will be sure to note the band’s originality and capacity for variety of stylistic sonorities. The worldwide success of Paris Washboard since 1988 demonstrates that this kind of group, absolutely peerless in the trad jazz world, is bringing something new in a jazz style that originated in the earliest years of the genre. The quartet combines conviviality, youthful enthusiasm, humor, professionalism, and exceptional musical individualities – all to perform a rich repertoire inspired by giants such as James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, Duke Ellington, and including original compositions.

Capitol Focus Jazz Band
REVIEW by Jim McGann
Sunday, January 26, 2020
Community Arts Center, Wallingford, PA

Dave Robinson - leader, trumpet, cornet
Ben Jackson - assistant director, trombone
De Angelo Palucho - trombone
Keegan Couse - clarinet, tenor sax
Kevin Granados - clarinet, tenor sax
Meya Collings - piano, vocals
Ben Coleman - banjo, amplified guitar
Nick Obrigewitch - tuba
Quale Saracco - tuba
Sten Greifer - drums

Today we had a concert where the drummer was playing with the band for the first time and the band was in-between trumpet players so the leader had to fill in. There were sound problems and other issues. A recipe for disaster one would say. As things turned out, it was a very enjoyable outing from Dave Robinson's Capitol Focus Jazz Band despite the obstacles.

The band kicked off the afternoon concert with a spirited swinging version of John Philip Sousa's "The Washington Post March," featured short solos from Keegan Couse on clarinet, Ben Jackson on trombone, and Meya Collings on piano. Ellington's "Black and Tan Fantasy" had good plunger mute work from Jackson and Couse capturing a New Orleans form of clarinet playing. Also noteworthy was newcomer Sten Greifer's rim-tapping behind Collings' after-hours piano solo.

"The Pileated Woodpecker Stomp," yes you read that right, an original Dave Robinson composition, has a story behind it which is as interesting as the composition itself. As Robinson described, the band was part of a "jazz and bird watching" event at Cornell College of Ornithology, and the aforementioned title was inspired by the event. The composition's opening riff, which featured a staccato riff backed by Greifer's woodblocks, simulated a woodpecker's primary function.

Meya Collings was featured on vocal for the first of two times during the concert. Bessie Smith's "Nobody Knows You When You are Down and Out" was the song of choice. While no one can match the Empress of the Blues when it comes to emotional intensity, Ms. Collings captured the spirit of the lyrics, singing with passion. Her second performance, on Cole Porter’s “Let’s Misbehave,” again captured the spirit of Porter’s lyrics.

It was back to Swing City with “Down In Honky Tonk Town” with the leader alternating between playing open horn and playing through a metal derby. The performance allowed Rob Coleman some solo work on banjo and dueting with Couse’s clarinet.

After a performance of Jelly Roll Morton’s “Grandpa’s Spells” which featured tuba breaks by Nick Obrigewitch, the personnel changed and Kevin Granados replaced Couse on clarinet. Quale Saracco, who had appeared on the band’s first two numbers, replaced Obrigewitch on “Someday Sweetheart.” The performance also allowed Coleman a solo on amplified guitar.

With DeAngelo Palucho replacing Jackson on trombone and Obrigewitch returning on tuba, the first set closed with “Home” and Johnny St. Cyr’s “Oriental Strut,” the latter a most effective closing number with a pulsing tuba beat by Obrigewitch, timely banjo breaks by Coleman, and a great stop time cornet break by Robinson. The final few choruses of this number reminded this writer of “Sorry” by Bix and His Gang. The band seemed to swing like the earlier Bix effort.

The second set had its share of moments. Jelly Roll Morton’s “Kansas City Stomps” could be re-titled “Kansas City Breaks,” since Jackson, Robinson, Couse, and Coleman were featured in a short solo break, leaving Collings the only one with a somewhat lengthy solo. “Chimes Blues” had Robinson performing the famous Armstrong solo while Collings provided the “Chimes” effects on piano. Drew Flores’ “Sassy Cat Stomp” allowed some tenor sax work from Couse while Horace Silver's “The Preacher,” not a vehicle in tradjazz circles, was turned into a Kansas City swing romp, allowing Granados a tenor sax solo, and more of Coleman’s amplified guitar, which seemed to fit better in this environment.

There were more good performances than what I noted here. This 2020 edition of the Capital Focus Jazz Band was a fine unit, with many promising future stars, thanks to Dave Robinson’s guidance and direction.
Profile of the Month
Our Board Members and Volunteers
Lynn Redmile

I love being a traditional jazz fan! But I took a bit of a roundabout way to become one! While growing up in southern Africa, learning to play piano by ear, a family friend taught me some boogie woogie.

Three months of classical piano lessons gave me rudimentary reading skills, and I chose Scott Joplin’s "The Entertainer" as my first piece to learn from sheet music when I was about 10 years old. Syncopation and a stride-style seemed to come very naturally to me. As a teen, I enjoyed pop music as well as Fred & Ginger’s movie soundtracks, but in early adulthood I was actually interested in a more modern style of jazz (Oscar Peterson, Dave Grusin, Dave Brubeck, Earl Klugh, etc.). The first jazz club I visited was in London when I lived there in the early 90s. My deep love of swing and traditional jazz actually started relatively recently – via dance! I’ve danced all my life (ballet, ballroom, Argentine tango, etc.), and soon after I moved to the USA (northern Jersey, actually), I discovered swing dancing and lindy hop- my first class was just after 9/11/2001. And the music now lives in my soul. I got to know many of the musicians who played for us, and planned my dance outings around which bands were playing where. Still one of my favorite things to see is musicians and dancers playing off one another, encouraging each other to do more, while celebrating that symbiosis.

I became a professional photographer through striving to capture the passion of musicians and the joy of dancers, and have traveled to dance events and jazz festivals all over the country in that pursuit. My work has been published in the Wall Street Journal, Hot House Jazz, Syncopated Times, Jersey Jazz, as well as many other local and international publications, websites and CD covers.

I’m honored to serve as Vice President on the board of directors of Tri-State Jazz Society. It was my husband, jazz trumpeter/cornetist Danny Tobias, who introduced me to the TSJS when I attended one of his performances in January 2013, not long after we met, and I’ve attended many TSJS concerts since then! Jazz (mostly traditional) is the cornerstone of our life, and I am unwavering in my support of Danny and all other jazz musicians. Through the years of attending concerts and festivals, I am keenly aware of how few young people attend to only listen to traditional jazz and swing, yet they flock to dance events all over the country (and beyond) to dance to live musicians playing this same fabulous music. I’m determined to find a way to bring these worlds together so that in decades to come, musicians will continue to have thriving concert audiences. (If you have any suggestions, I’d love to hear them!)

Unlike many of the other board members, I am not retired - in addition to photography, I commute daily to New York City from Hamilton NJ and work fulltime. I also occasionally shoot and design CD covers. My background is quite varied - project manager (SAP software implementations), executive assistant (to CEOs/CFOs/General Counsel), office manager, etc. I took an unconventional path with my education - I worked fulltime for more than 25 years before I returned to school to earn my B.Sc. (Finance) with honors.

In my limited spare time, I attend concerts and festivals locally and around the country, I still play the piano for my own enjoyment, and am attempting to learn the ukelele. I enjoy listening to most genres of music - I have an eclectic CD collection. I gave up riding my motorcycle (a 600cc sportbike) but I still love to dance - whether it’s lindy hop, a waltz or rumba, my feeble attempts at Argentine tango, or anything else!
