WE ARE PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE OUR NEXT CONCERT
Bob Kreitz - Solo Piano
Sunday, October 25, 2020 — 2:00 pm
A Live Streaming Event

Bob Kreitz has been a professional pianist for nearly a half-century, indulging his preference for New Orleans style, ragtime, and traditional jazz. Bob performs solo for Tri-State’s next concert. He has also performed with the Ben Mauger Vintage Jazz Band - he was a featured member of the band when they appeared at Tri-State in June 2019. In addition, Bob has shown his versatility leading the Pretzel City Dixieland Jazz Band, playing tuba at least in one YouTube video. He has performed at many traditional jazz festivals and societies, including TSJS, Pennsylvania Jazz Society, Potomac River Jazz Club, the Hot Steamed Jazz Festival in Essex Connecticut, and Florida’s SunCoast Jazz Club. Bob has accomplished his long-standing goal of playing both Broadway and Bourbon Street, in addition to many venues in between.

Hot Club of Philadelphia
REVIEW by Jim McGann
Sunday, September 13, 2020, 2:00 – 4:00pm
Community Arts Center, Wallingford, PA

It is the most different of times. Or to paraphrase Dickens, “It [is] the best of times, it [is] the worst of times…”

The Band:
Barry Wahrhaftig - leader, guitar, vocals
Zach Devine - guitar, vocals
Joseph Arnold - violin
Jim Stager - bass

February 2020. The long-awaited Paris Washboard group performed for TSJS at HUMC, in front of an enthusiastic audience which numbered 100 strong. The concert was a rousing success. There was freedom of movement and not a mask in sight.

A month later, the pandemic arrived, affecting everyone. Phrases like “staying safe,” “social distancing,” and “the new normal” have become part of our vocabulary. People wear masks now and with the limited businesses that are opened, heavy restrictions have been put in place.

This Sunday, Tri-State commenced with live concerts, albeit limited in capacity, with most of today’s audience viewing the concert via internet. And to headline the event, Barry Wahrhaftig’s Hot Club of Philadelphia. The group performed for TSJS back in 2014, and I, like many others suffering from the claustrophobic restraints of the pandemic, was ready to see and hear anything that was musical.

It was an outdoor concert on the grounds of the Community Arts Center. With thick graying cumulus clouds above, the scene was as far as removed as previous TSJS concerts. Few were in attendance, and those who were there wore masks and were seated a good distance from each other. The free environment where the Paris Washboard concert took place seemed like a distant memory.

With all this going on, I wished the concert was a comforting retreat for those who attended. It may not have been. The problem was not the musicianship, for all four members of the HCoP performed outstandingly. It was the program itself. There were too few Django Reinhardt, too few Tin Pan Alley songs, and little hot jazz. Instead, the concert... included music by the Beatles, Ray Charles, and even Jimi Hendrix as well as other composers outside the jazz canon. While the group tried to perform these songs in a Gypsy-jazz vein, which they usually can pull off, today it did not work.

There were few numbers up-tempo, and a lot of slow numbers played in succession. The first set featured Stephen Foster’s “Hard Times,” “Nuages,” and “September Song” – all individually good, but grouping them back to back without an up-tempo number in-between can make for a boring concert.

There were highlights. “Blue Drag” began and closed with a Jim Stager bass vamp, not far removed from Israel Crosby’s vamping on “Blues In C Sharp Minor” or “Blues of Israel.” You could add that the overall performance was similar in concept to the recordings in question. “Melodie au Crépuscule” featured beautiful work by violinist Joseph Arnold and the leader. Best of all was “Joseph, Joseph.” Described by Wahrhaftig as a “Klezmer thing,” an up-tempo tour-de-force with Arnold discharging rapid arpeggios followed by chromatic scaling, Wahrhaftig at his most Django and an exhilarating final chorus. It made one wish the rest of the concert was as exciting.

The Hot Club of Philadelphia is an excellent group, and I can understand the need to come up with fresh material. But, let us leave Hendrix to Woodstock, the Beatles to Ed Sullivan, and focus on the titans that made the music popular. Eddie South, Stuff Smith, Joe Venuti, Eddie Lang, Carl Kress, Dick McDonough – all those musicians (apart from South) probably never experienced the sounds of Gypsy Jazz. Though I am convinced that a gypsy jazz band like HCoP could perform something by Venuti/Lang, a Kress/McDonough duo, maybe a hokey, jivey Stuff Smith number – and it would work.

At one point during the concert, I heard the leader say, “Better days are coming.” Let’s hope so.

You can view a recording of this concert, as well as a collection of previous concerts, on the Tri-State Jazz Society YouTube channel.

Coming in November – Check the Tri-State website and watch for email with information about next month's live-streamed concert, scheduled for Sunday, November 15 at 2:00 p.m.
